Uxbridge Choral Society is one of the foremost amateur choirs in West London with a growing reputation for exciting repertoire and quality performances.

A 2016 performance of the Verdi Requiem, jointly with Aylesbury Choral Society, under the direction of Jeff Stewart, produced the following response from the audience:

"The choir, the soloists and orchestra were magnificent!"

"This is how Verdi's Requiem is supposed to be heard"

"The best performance of the Verdi Requiem that I have ever heard by an amateur choir"

After eight fantastic years, we are very sad that our conductor Jeff Stewart has moved on to other things, but delighted to announce the appointment of Tim Armstrong-Taylor as our new Musical Director, starting in September 2017.

Tim is a graduate of the Guildhall School of music and an experienced and accomplished conductor, singer, composer, writer, teacher and producer.

We look forward eagerly to this year's programme under his direction!

NO FORMAL AUDITION IS REQUIRED

We welcome experienced singers, but also seek to encourage singers who are out of practice, or less experienced. Our aim is to improve the singing technique of all our members. It is a help if you can read music, but we are equally happy if you can learn quickly by ear.

Tim will talk to each newcomer, and in accepting new members, he will take account of the need to balance the different voice parts.
